By 2020, the bar that sets with your meal at Marina Bay Sands is likely to set new sustainable records.

That is a part of the goals set by the Integrated Resort (IR) as it aims to be the first in the region to make its F&B operations 100 per cent sustainable and animal-friendly, a move that is expected to set the benchmark for sustainable food offerings in the industry.

The petri dish sits atop a granite base on raised stone pavement – a design that emulates an aquarium, symbolizing the marine environment that supports all life. The display is part of Marina Bay Sands' sustainability initiative to elevate sustainability standards, raise awareness among its guests and inspire other industry players to follow suit,
